According to preliminary data,
we welcomed a record
8.5 million passengers and operated 73,300 flights

MARTIN GAUSS
Chief Executive Officer, airBaltic

Dear guests of airBaltic,

The early months of a new year are always a great opportunity to evaluate progress and set ambitious goals for the future. Thus, we are proud to share that 2024 marked several historic milestones for airBaltic. According to preliminary data, we welcomed a record 8.5 million passengers and operated 73,300 flights, exceeding our pre-pandemic performance. These results highlight the trust of passengers and the dedication of our team in providing reliable air connectivity. A detailed overview of our past year's key moments and future outlook will be shared during the upcoming investor call later this year.

We are setting our sights even higher for the year ahead. airBaltic has already kicked off 2025 with a success, having conducted test flights for SpaceX's Starlink high-speed internet on our Airbus A220-300 aircraft. Both flights departed from Riga and tested the aero terminal and internet quality. We are now advancing towards certification from the European Union Aviation Safety Agency. This game-changing technology will revolutionise air travel, and we are proud to be the first airline in Europe to soon offer Starlink free of charge. Fleet-wide installation on our Airbus A220-300s is expected to begin in Q1 2025.

By strengthening our operational capabilities, we have also successfully launched two new aircraft hangars at our home base, RIX Riga Airport. Designed to accommodate Airbus A220-300 aircraft, these facilities enhance our ability to maintain the highest standards of safety and efficiency while supporting the fleet's continued growth. Furthermore, with the global demand for Airbus A220 maintenance on the rise, airBaltic is proud to expand its services also to international customers.

Moreover, airBaltic has recently made a significant advancement in pilot training, with the addition of a second Airbus A220 full-flight simulator. This state-of-the-art technology will improve the airline's ability to train pilots and maintain their qualifications. It will also support fleet expansion and the continued development of the Pilot Academy. Currently, only two such simulators operate in northern Europe – both managed by airBaltic. This latest investment strengthens the airline's position as the region's leading training hub.

In conclusion, we invite you to enjoy your flight with confidence, knowing your safety remains our top priority. airBaltic has recently been recognised one of the world's safest airlines for 2025 by Airline Ratings, a leading authority on airline safety, passenger reviews, and industry news. The ranking places us among the top 50 safest airlines globally. This recognition highlights our commitment to providing a safe and comfortable travel experience, which is made possible by the dedication of our team, who work tirelessly to uphold the highest standards of excellence.

Thank you for choosing us, and we look forward to welcoming you on board again soon!

Yours,
Martin Gauss
President and CEO

Cultural jewels to discover

Spend a weekend outside Riga to explore Latvia's concert halls.

Regional concert halls are making a strong statement in the Latvian cultural tourism sector – they're true jewels to discover for those who want to admire architectural expertise while exploring countless events and festivals. If you're already curious, it's definitely worth planning a weekend trip to attend an unforgettable concert and even having a private tour of the venue beforehand.

The town of Rēzekne lies about a three-hour drive from Riga, and it preserves its cultural heritage and hosts global arts trends at the venue called Gors, The Embassy of Latgale. With a name that translates to 'spirit', this is the first acoustic concert hall newly built after the restoration of Latvia's independence. Its structure, which has won numerous design competitions, allows the acoustic properties to be changed depending on the type of event, with wall and ceiling shields made locally in Rēzekne.

In the Kurzeme region in western Latvia, two resort towns on the Baltic Sea coast each host a spectacular concert hall. The venue in Ventspils proudly bears the name 'Latvija'. Its architects, David Cook and Martin Haas of Germany, were influenced by Caspar David Friedrich's painting The Sea of Ice, incorporating strong lines in the concert hall design that resemble stacks of ice sheets. The hall itself serves as a musical instrument, with acoustic shields on the ceiling and acoustic curtains in the balcony framing two world-class instruments: a concert organ (with 3500 pipes placed three stories high) and the world's largest vertical piano (made by Dāvids Kļaviņš).

◀ Nan Goldin, Christmas at The Other Side, Boston, 1972, photography from the series The Other Side

Nan Goldin: This Will Not End Well is a major retrospective of work by the American photographer and filmmaker (until April 6; Potsdamer Straße 50; smb.museum). Her extraordinary artistic perspective unveils intimate stories about love and loss, addiction and independence. Known for her love of cinema, Goldin (b. 1953) started out by presenting her photographic slideshows, often accompanied by eclectic soundtracks, in various clubs and public venues in New York City as well as underground cinemas and film festivals in Europe. Her magnum opus, The Ballad of Sexual Dependency (1981–2022), documents life in Berlin, London, and on the Lower East Side of New York from the 1970s to the present day. The main characters – creatives and bohemians – are depicted in wild parties and everyday life, with raw tenderness as they struggle between autonomy and dependency. The upper hall of the Neue Nationalgalerie in Berlin is divided into six building-like sites designed by architect Hala Wardé, each responding to specific work by Goldin and accompanied by sound installations.

One of the key events in the global film industry, the Berlin International Film Festival, celebrates its 75th edition this year (February 13–23; berlinale.de). Known to host the largest number of visitors in the world, the red carpets at the Berlinale bring together elite stars and a diverse film programme that counts up to 400 films in various sections and genres every year. For example, the Berlinale Goes Kiez programme celebrates the urban legacy of art-house cinemas, which, with their diverse architecture, history, and selection of films, had an important social function as well. Watching movies from this year's Berlinale programme in seven such cinemas is a great alternative way to discover the city.

Balloon Museum is a new immersive experience that strikes the imagination of children as well as adults (until April 20; Eichenstraße 4; balloonmuseum.world). The massive temporary staging in Arena Berlin presents interactive balloon-themed installations created by 25 artists from across the globe. With different forms of expression inspired by air, movement, curious shapes, lights, and sounds, each installation invites visitors to touch, discover, and share an emotional experience, unveiling art as a means of socialising and having fun. A Quiet Storm, for example, is a game of contrasts in which countless white spheres fall to the ground, caressing visitors like tiny soap bubbles and challenging the senses. In another part of the show, Airscape is a virtual reality video that presents a game-like travel experience around castles and underwater worlds made of balloons of various shapes and sizes.

PhotoBrussels Festival is celebrating its ninth edition by offering a journey through contemporary photography at 47 cultural venues across the Belgian capital (until February 23; photobrusselsfestival.com). Like the diverse programme, the various exhibition spaces reflect the creative and cosmopolitan face of Brussels. The festival features participants from around the world who explore a wide spectrum of ever-changing photographic language; it also hosts workshops, book signings, discussions, and conferences. Discover the festival along various routes (on foot or via tram or bicycle) based on specific interests and locations. The Bright Festival (February 13–16), for its part, is an illuminated nocturnal extravaganza you shouldn't miss if you're in Brussels this month. Every evening from 6:30 to 11:00 p.m., nearly 20 sparkling and poetic light installations by international artists adorn the Royal and European quarters, alongside museum activities and guided tours.

The Tram Experience is an unconventional gastronomic journey that treats the taste buds as well as the eyes to a memorable tour of the city (book at shop.tramexperience.brussels). During this dinner ride, iconic locations in the Belgian capital are discovered from on board a revamped 1960s tram car that has been turned into a moving restaurant accommodating up to 36 guests. The 12th edition of Tram Experience focuses on Brussels' up-and-coming young chefs. In February and March, talented Camille Jadoul from L'Altitude is in charge of the menu. In her restaurant, hearty seasonal dishes create a sparkling duo with a listening-bar experience in which nonstop vinyl records set the good vibes.

The Grand Hotel Astoria – a century-old Belle Époque gem – has recently reopened under the name Corinthia Brussels (Rue Royale, 103; corinthia.com; from EUR 501). Located on the Rue Royale, the hotel with 90 rooms, 31 suites, and an exquisite subterranean spa has undergone a complete makeover. The original architectural features, such as the glass skylight, glorious central staircase, and original stained-glass windows, are signature elements that link history with modernity, while the room design exudes luxury and timeless elegance. Le Petit Bon Bon serves traditional Belgian favourites with a modern twist, while Palais Royal treats guests to a menu influenced by French and Japanese cuisine. Underground, Corinthia Spa by Sisley (the only hotel spa in the capital) tempts guests with private treatment rooms, saunas, experience showers, a tearoom, and bespoke fitness equipment.

The Pink Sails exhibition at the Moderna Museet offers an inspiring overview of Swedish Modernism, presenting unique paintings from the museum's collection dating from 1900 to 1940 (until August 3; Exercisplan 4; modernamuseet.se). Against the background of major social changes in the early 20th century, as Sweden began to transform from an agricultural society to an industrial one, a shift was also taking place in local art, influenced in part by such grand cities as Paris or Berlin. While some artists reflected these dynamic changes through expressionism, depicting bustling urban cityscapes and industrialisation, others longed for the past and portrayed scenes of everyday life and emotions. Industrial society versus nature became an endless topic for exploitation, as did memories, dreams, and the subconscious as well as inspiration from folk tales and myths. The exhibition brings together around 100 works by prominent Swedish modernists who explored new styles to reflect on the changing times.

In the heart of the Södermalm district, a Neoclassical building from 1875 has just reopened as the Stockholm Stadshotell, where personal service combines with top-notch design and local gastronomy (Björngårdsgatan 23; stockholmstadshotell.com; from SEK 4300). The building was restored by a team of local architects, while the interiors were inspired by the Arts and Crafts movement of the 1870s, which emphasised the power of craftsmanship and high-quality materials. Every detail at the Stadshotell has been meticulously composed in collaboration with designers and artisans to create 32 rooms, each unique in appearance. The backdrop of muted colours, natural materials, solid wood, and linen fabrics offers bespoke comfort. The hotel's bistro serves seasonal Nordic delicacies, but the real gem is the freshly restored Matsal, where curated dinners are served in the atmospheric setting of a former chapel.

Surrounded by breathtaking Nordic scenery, A Day on the Ice is a guided ice skating tour on natural ice that embraces the power of winter and the pure joy of becoming one with nature and speed (February 1, 8, 15, 22; Kungsbro strand 21; stockholmadvantures.com). This thrilling gliding experience is perfect for those who have some prior experience on skates. The tour, which includes an introduction about various skating techniques, begins early in the morning to make the most of the daylight and includes nearly six hours of skating. Depending on the weather and ice conditions, the group may skate from 20 to 70 kilometres across the Stockholm Archipelago or on one of Stockholm's lakes, such as Mälaren, which is the fifth-largest lake in Europe. Beginners should consider signing up for the Introduction to Ice Skating Tour that's five to 30 kilometres long. Scenic photo stops and shelters are planned along the route, and there's also a picnic lunch with sausages grilled over an open fire.

Carnival magic in Tenerife

February in Tenerife is marked by the exciting
Carnival of Santa Cruz de Tenerife.

Every February or March, Tenerife's capital turns into a colourful month-long celebration with breathtaking parades, various activities and concerts, and even a contest in which the most impressive Carnival costume is crowned. It's the second-largest Carnival in the world, losing only to the famous Rio de Janeiro festival, and has been around for as long as anyone can remember.

The roots of the Carnival of Santa Cruz de Tenerife date back several centuries, and there seems to be no single fully agreed upon account of its origin. However, the emergence of various music groups in the 19th and 20th centuries in the Canary Islands surely boosted the significance of costumes and, consequently, the festival. Each orchestra (rondalla), singing ensemble (murga), and singing and dancing group (comparsa) has its own unique costumes that distinguish it from other groups.

While nowadays the Carnival is all about the joy, the party, and the celebration of the culture of the Canary Islands, the event and its colourful costumes once carried a revolutionary meaning as well. When General Franco ruled in Spain, including the Canary Islands, the whole Carnival movement was restricted because it was too closely associated with individuality, traditional costumes, and identity. But the restrictions couldn't stop the music and dance groups from performing in the streets; as a disguise, however, they often placed a beggar up front to pretend that they were performing to raise funds for the poor.

Today, one of the main activities of the Carnival is the election of the Carnival Queen, in which the public votes on who has the most extravagant costume. Decorated with countless jewels, feathers, and other eye-catching elements, some of those costumes can weigh more than a hundred kilograms.

Carnival has also gained international recognition, having been included in the UNESCO Intangible Cultural Heritage list. To find out more about the history of the tradition, view the most memorable outfits up close, and even dress up and immerse yourself in the role of a carnival participant, a visit to the Casa del Carnaval (the Museum of Carnival) in Santa Cruz de Tenerife is a must when you travel to this picturesque Canary Island.

MARBANO

Marbano, a family winery nestled in the historic wine region of Bolnisi, Southeast Georgia, carries on an ancient tradition dating back to the 8th century BC. With deep passion, winemaker Levan Bandzeladze crafts exquisite wines from carefully selected grape varieties sourced from Georgia's finest regions: Kartli, Kakheti, Imereti, and Racha-Lechkhumi.

The wine is made from the Asuretuli grape variety, which is exclusively grown in the village of Asureti in the Kartli region.

Its colour is dark ruby, and it is full-bodied and refined. The wine has a pleasant, cheerful acidity with cherry, blackberry, and blackcurrant tones. With aging, the bouquet develops with notes of spices (pepper, cloves) and dried fruits (black plums).

Mediterranean spring

Tired of winter landscapes? Escape to Barcelona and embrace the first scents of spring.

With winter behind it, Barcelona flirts with the Mediterranean once again and lets spring set the mood. At the end of February, warmth returns to the coast, with joggers tracing the water's edge at dawn and swimmers testing the lingering chill of the tide. Terrace tables fill with people enjoying their morning café con leche, their conversations mingling with the gentle sound of the waves.

At midday, the promenade is alive with activity, a common thread linking the neighbourhoods from Barceloneta to Poble Nou. You can stop for an ice-cold Estrella Damm and grilled sardines at the airy seaside bars, or scout out a sunny stretch of sand for the day. For Barcelona, the Mediterranean Sea is a part of everyday life, woven into the cultural fabric of the city. Its waters feed the city's vibrant marketplaces, from La Boqueria to the Sant Antoni and Santa Caterina markets, with shimmering prawns, squid, anchovies, and sea bass arriving fresh every morning. Its shores inspire everything from the Catalan modernist mosaics of Parc Güell to the geometric design of the iconic W Barcelona hotel, which rises like a sailboat over the horizon.

Spring is a season of reconnection, and nowhere is that felt more than by the sea. Whether you're gliding over glassy waves on a paddleboard, strolling along the sun-drenched promenade, or sharing a paella with friends by the water, the Mediterranean offers a sense of renewal that mirrors the city's own. As Barcelona awakens, spring offers plenty of opportunities to embrace the Mediterranean Sea as the locals do. With the sea as your guide, here are three unforgettable ways to connect with Barcelona's Mediterranean soul this spring.

HOW TO CONNECT WITH BARCELONA'S SEASIDE SOUL

Feast on the flavours of the Mediterranean

Barcelona's seafood restaurants celebrate the essence of the Mediterranean with simple, bold flavours. In the historic fishing district of Barceloneta, traditional taverns serve fragrant paellas, fresh fish, and perfectly grilled prawns and sardines. For a classic experience, head to Can Solé, one of Barcelona's oldest and most famous seafood spots. If you prefer a more laid-back beach atmosphere, Xiringuito Escrivà offers a relaxed beachfront setting that's perfect for seafood tapas with a view.

Get out on the water

Spring is the perfect time to embrace the Mediterranean Sea. Start your day by gliding along the calm coastline on a paddleboard, or charter a catamaran for an unforgettable sunset cruise. For thrill-seekers, Castelldefels Beach, just a short train ride away, offers steady spring breezes and wide-open sands perfect for kiteboarding. If swimming is more your style, Barcelona's beaches have plenty to offer. Barceloneta attracts crowds even in spring, so head to Poble Nou for a quieter, more relaxed seaside escape.

Explore the Camí de Ronda

For an unforgettable coastal adventure, take the train to Vilanova i la Geltrú and follow the Camí de Ronda trail towards Sitges. This stunning route winds along dramatic cliffs, secret coves, and sweeping views of the sea. It offers a peaceful escape from the hustle and bustle of the city, with plenty of swimmable coves for a refreshing dip. The journey ends in Sitges, where golden beaches, a laid-back atmosphere, and waterfront cafés invite you to relax with an ice-cold drink.

Cortina d'Ampezzo is not called the Queen of the Dolomites for nothing. Here, the fantastic, rugged peaks of the Southern Alps provide a breathtaking backdrop to winter activities. With hundreds of kilometres of slopes, chic boutiques, exclusive restaurants serving Tyrolean cuisine, luxurious chalet accommodations, and a vibrant après-ski scene, Cortina is one of Italy's most sought-after ski resorts.

Easily accessible by car from the Innsbruck airport, the town already has a proud Olympic heritage, having hosted the 1956 Winter Olympics. The venues used for those games later also featured in the 1981 James Bond film For Your Eyes Only. In 2026, the world's most prestigious winter competition will return to the Dolomites, this time co-hosted by Milan and Cortina.

Preparations are already in full swing. Cortina is currently renovating its Eugenio Monti Olympic Track, which opened in 1923, for bobsleigh, luge, and skeleton competitions. And at the iconic Stadio Olimpico del Ghiaccio, you can test the Olympic ice by skating in the arena yourself.

Even without the Olympics, Cortina d'Ampezzo is a world-class ski resort. The main attraction is access to Dolomiti Superski, the largest ski area in the world. Cortina offers 120 kilometres of varied slopes, all linked by a network of lifts and cable cars. Faloria, Cristallo, Pocol-Tofana, and Cinque Torri are all enchanting ski areas in the heart of the Dolomites. As well as classic skiing and snowboarding, you can also try cross-country skiing, snowshoeing, ice climbing, and mountaineering.

Those seeking the dolce vita will find it in abundance in Cortina. Sip a bombardino (Italy's favourite winter drink) with a view at one of the après-ski chalets. Try delicious Tyrolean dishes such as casunziei (stuffed pasta), spätzle (fresh egg-based pasta similar to spinach gnocchi), and canederli (bread dumplings). Shop in the upscale seven-storey La Cooperativa di Cortina department store. And for something special, indulge in Alpine cuisine at the Michelin-starred Tivoli restaurant while gazing at the mountains.

After decades of neglect, the Savarin Palace has been beautifully restored to its former glory. Its stunning façade, adorned with intricately carved Baroque statues and an elegant cast-iron balcony, leads to fairytale-like interiors. Now home to the Mucha Museum, which will open to the public in early March, the palace seamlessly blends the grandeur of Baroque architecture with the refined elegance of Alphonse Mucha's Art Nouveau masterpieces, brought to life by the Czech architecture firm AI Design.

A highlight of Prague's luxurious Na Příkopě shopping boulevard, this Baroque gem was designed in the mid-18th century by the renowned Bohemian architect Kilian Ignaz Dientzenhofer. Now, it's the first building in the vast Savarin complex to reopen to the public after a meticulous restoration. The work combines the preservation of historical buildings with the addition of modern structures and public spaces such as walkways, gardens, and rooftop terraces that offer breathtaking views of Prague's city centre. This ambitious project, led by the property developer Crestyl and the iconic British designer Thomas Heatherwick, has transformed a once hidden treasure into one of Prague's most exciting cultural landmarks.

Czech illustrator, painter, and graphic artist Alphonse Mucha is known as one of the most influential figures of the Art Nouveau movement. His signature style, characterised by flowing and curvy lines, pastel hues, natural motifs, and idyllic portraits of women, rose to fame in Paris in 1894, when he created a poster for Gismonda, a play starring the celebrated French actress Sarah Bernhardt. Mucha's style became synonymous with Art Nouveau and continues to inspire modern-day graphic design and art.

The Mucha Museum showcases a permanent collection of 90 works from the Mucha Trust Collection. Visitors are guided through the artist's creative journey, culminating in an awe-inspiring masterpiece that serves as the centrepiece of the museum. Considered Mucha's magnum opus, The Slav Epic is a series of 20 monumental canvases depicting the mythology and history of the Czechs and other Slavic peoples. The exhibition space, with its soaring ten-metre-high ceilings, allows The Slav Epic to be displayed exactly as Mucha envisioned it. mucha.eu

Fermentation renaissance

In a surprising twist, ancient preservation techniques are now leading the charge in modern gastronomy.

Bruder has a wall full of jars of fermented cocktail ingredients.

When timeless traditions meet modern culinary curiosity, the result is a global flavour revolution powered by pickling, fermentation, and a touch of microbial magic. While bacteria may not seem like a welcome guest in most restaurant kitchens, they’re earning a coveted place in jars around the world. Chefs are reviving ancient techniques, unlocking bold flavours, and reaping rewards that are both practical and delicious.

These time-honoured processes enhance flavours and extend shelf life in ingenious ways. Fermentation, for example, relies on microbes to transform sugars into tangy, complex flavours, while pickling preserves food in acidic solutions such as vinegar. Cultures worldwide have embraced these methods for centuries – think kimchi, tempeh, and miso from Southeast Asia or horseradish, pickled vegetables, kefir, and sauerkraut in Eastern Europe. Got an abundance of garden beets? Channel the Swedes, Finns, or Balts and marinate them to perfection.

And it’s not just veggies getting the spotlight. Food scientists are pushing boundaries, using fermentation to create animal proteins that don’t contain a single animal cell – a potential game-changer for sustainability.

Fermented foods aren’t just eco-friendly and cost-efficient; they’re also packed with probiotics, bolstering gut health and aligning with the ever-growing trend for functional food. Diners are embracing this flavourful comeback, and chefs are equally inspired. These techniques unlock new avenues for culinary creativity, delivering umami-rich depth and an element of surprise that defines exceptional dishes. Good for your health, the planet, and your palate? Pass the pickle jar!

PLACES THAT CELEBRATE FERMENTED FLAVOURS

Pas Mus in Vilnius
Translating to ‘our house’, this aptly named restaurant exudes romance, with dripping candles, mismatched floral and crystal tableware, and shelves brimming with jars of a preserved Lithuanian harvest. These jars, which showcase treasures from chef-owner Vita Bartininkaitė’s home garden and foraging adventures, aren’t just for show. In a charming twist, diners might even be asked to pass a jar if the kitchen runs short, transforming a simple meal into an engaging, interactive experience.

Pilies gatvė 28; IG/pasmusrestoranas

Scully Restaurant in London
With walls lined with vivid jars of pickles and preserves, it’s not hard to guess chef Ramael Scully’s passion. Born in Malaysia (to a Chinese-Indian mother and Irish-Balinese father) and raised in Sydney, Scully’s multifaceted background inspires his culinary creations. Using locally sourced ingredients, he crafts imaginative plates such as steamed sea bass drizzled with Ethiopian spiced butter and tangy, salt-brined green tomatillos. The dishes are served in a relaxed yet understated, elegant setting.

Bruder Küche & Bar in Vienna

Tucked behind a green wooden façade, this establishment is equal parts cocktail haven and culinary gem. While the star of the show is undoubtedly the artfully crafted cocktails, the rotating menu of modern Austrian dishes ensures it’s just as suited for a satisfying dinner. Inside, arched ceilings, vibrant artwork, and tiled floors create a warm atmosphere. The centrepiece – colossal jars of preserves stacked behind the bar – is also evident in the dishes Bruder serves, so pull up one of those classic Viennese chairs and enjoy!

TAILS is a seafood restaurant with a unique new concept on Riga’s gastronomic scene. Designed by London-based Studio Caché, the restaurant demonstrates a refined sense of aesthetics inspired by the Baltic Sea coast. The space boasts two areas: the classic dining room and a Raw Bar counter opposite the open kitchen. The menu celebrates sea delicacies, from light crudo dishes to the house specialty: dry-aged fish that explores new depths of flavours.

COD

Contemporary Japanese Cuisine

Open since 2016 COD is the first restaurant that introduced high-end Japanese cuisine to Latvia. Combining traditional recipes with modern cooking techniques, the menu revolves around robata-grilled dishes as well as the Chef’s take on tataki, tempura and sushi.

COD’s gastronomic concept, helmed by Head Chef Arturs Taskans, brings an exciting local flair to the table with a unique synergy of Asian and Nordic flavours, which fuse beautifully and offer a dining experience that is truly different. The restaurant is complemented by a cocktail lounge serving beverages and signature cocktails designed as a perfect match to COD culinary creations.

This AI-generated illustration has been inspired by the works of the English painter John Everett Millais (1829–1896). A child prodigy, at the age of 11 he became the youngest student to enter the Royal Academy Schools. Later, Millais gained recognition as one of the founders of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. Together with other painters, poets, and art critics, they created a movement that sought a return to abundant detail, intense colour, and complex compositions. The portraits by Millais, including Mariana (1851) and Ophelia (1851–52), are some of the most spectacular examples of this style.

THE LONDON LOUNGE

Lean into London like a real Londoner, with rambling walks around Regency villas and taverns tucked into townhouses.

Paris in the spring, sure, but did you ever find yourself in the frosty fog of London in February? It’s an enchanting flurry of fireside pubs, quaint fish and chip shops, and promenades in royal parks. I was once locked into Hyde Park at night by mistake, and unknowingly had the Royal Guards on horseback trying to find me. My friend and I sat under the stars and saw our cold breath in the air. I imagine it was like the scene in Elf, when the Central Park Rangers pursue Santa’s sleigh. Now, I do not recommend this spirited approach to sightseeing, but sitting by the Serpentine Lake in snowfall was certainly spectacular.

My brother recently visited London after a decade in Hong Kong. He suggested we meet at the gates of Buckingham Palace, of all places, as he first wanted to do a gaudy palace tour with his wife. I was incredulous, because this is not what locals do. Even my teenage daughter was embarrassed as we stood against the royal railings under my umbrella, waiting for them in torrential rain.

Suddenly, King Charles sailed out of the gates in his gallant and regal car, waving. I have never seen my daughter – who is not a monarchist – move so quickly to live and breathe the moment with her outstretched camera-phone alongside a breathless crowd of tourists. It could have been Beatlemania 1963.

It was hard to play it cool after that. The magic of London had swept us away. But so would the rain. The Green Park café was packed, so we crossed over The Mall to the Institute of Contemporary Arts (ICA) for a crowd-free coffee and browse of the bookshop.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON IN LONDON TOWN CAN FEEL FRENETIC, BUT THAT EXACT ENERGY WILL DRAW YOU BACK IN. ‘Where next?’ my guests asked. Fortnum & Mason for a Knickerbocker Glory, of course. And to stock up on Tofflossus biscuits and souvenir sundries (after all, if they’re good enough for Queen Camilla...).

And after that? As a local Londoner, I can surely give guests more than a few suggestions. Still peckish in Piccadilly? Wind onto St. James’s – round the back of the BAFTA headquarters and handsome St. James’s Church designed by Sir Christopher Wren – to the church yard, which now has street food stalls. On the other side, you’ve got the art district and Jermyn Street with its old-world clutch of cologne shops, tailors, and impeccable traders. This is the neighbourhood of Sotheby’s and Christie’s auction houses, but there’s so much art in so many different places that if you pieced them all together, you could pave a pathway with Picassos. It’s an interesting and unexploited area

In 2024, airBaltic launched an NFT collection featuring AI-generated works of art inspired by artists from its destinations. Each month, a new destination is showcased on the cover of Baltic Outlook magazine, blending technology and art to highlight airBaltic’s cultural network. Find the collection at Magic Eden.

Tick-tock. London serves up striking sights such as Big Ben and round-the-clock activity.

Get comfortable at The Devonshire before delectable dining upstairs.

Opt for wood-fired fish with biodynamic wine at Elliot's in Borough Market.

The Bloomsbury set heads for dinner – and ambiance – at Noble Rot on Lamb's Conduit.

London can still be quite wild on Fridays, and Trisha's jazz club on Greek Street is the ultimate finale for a night out to get lost in due to the loads of independent craftsmanship you won't find anywhere else. It's also a relatively quiet existence where you can just walk along and see amazing sketches and paintings, but you're just one street away from Piccadilly.

And from there, on to Denman Street in Soho for the best Guinness in London. Drop into The Devonshire pub, where you can fine-dine on delicious seafood, but do book ahead for a table upstairs to avoid the finance-y after-work crowd. It's very atmospheric with oak panels yet presents a modern twist on the style. You're in the West End here, but at the same time it feels like you're in the English countryside.

Or maybe China Town cuisine is calling you. If so, behind the nearby Shaftsbury Avenue fire station is a huge canteen called Jinli, which is a closely guarded secret for central London chefs after work. It sits on a square of dumpling bakeries that's decked out in pretty Chinese lanterns all year round. But don't expect to guess your way around Soho. I've lived in London for 25 years and still rely on a map. Though it could just be me...

Walk further into Soho and pull up to the marble-topped counter at Bocca di Lupo for cocktails. London can still be quite wild on Fridays, and Trisha's jazz club on Greek Street is the ultimate finale for a night out. You can't get any better for original, old-timey London. The club has still got that undercurrent of what this place was like in the past, but it's also very fun and dance-y. Humble and frill-free, this is cheap drinks and colourful characters. You may not remember leaving. Cocktails at Claridge's it is not.

One of the nicest things you can do on a Friday night is book a room at Hazlitt's Hotel or Kettner's. Yes, they've got beautiful rooms, but best of all, you'll be waking up in Soho on a Saturday. For example, the eclectic Maison Bertaux will be up and running for fantastic pastries. The sweet stuff there is tempting, but the Dijon slice and café au lait are simply delightful. For a similar slice of 'real London', head across town to E. Pellici (or just Pellici's) in Bethnal Green for breakfast. It's a fun and friendly Italian Art Deco-style workers' café that's been family-run since 1900 – cash only and no reservations.

SATURDAY IS NOT A DAY FOR THE SUBURBS. MEET YOUR COMPANIONS SOMEPLACE CENTRAL, AS THERE'S MUCH TO DO. If I'm craving culture, I'll start at The Strand and go to The Courtauld Gallery at Somerset House. Weekends aren't great for London galleries, as they can get really busy, but The Courtauld has been recently redeveloped and seems to be managing crowds really well. An ice-skating rink was the winter attraction, but there's always something going on in the square.

Now that you're at the River Thames, cross the bridge and walk over to the street known as The Cut. If you're interested in theatre, The Cut is the Holy Grail, as here you've got The Old Vic and The Young Vic. You can catch a matinee show at either. If you want modern and radical, go to the Young Vic; for world-class and a bit more pomp, opt for the elder institution. But you can't go wrong with either.

Afterwards, walk up The Cut towards Southwark to bustling Borough Market, which is a foodie's paradise. Lunch might be grilled baby aubergine, hispi cabbage, and a glass of natural wine at Elliot's on Stoney Street, which is the South London offshoot of the Hackney original. Or try Café François on the same street for oeufs piperade, rotisserie chicken, and melt-in-the-mouth macarons. Hashtag 'weekend treats'.

From here, many would take to Tate Modern – a commendable choice. From February 27 to August 31, you can see the Leigh Bowery! exhibition there. Punk is not dead.

For literature hounds, however, this SE1 postcode is 'Dickens town', where Charles Dickens grew up and started writing. Stand on the old wall of Marshalsea Prison to see where fictional Little Dorrit looked over to her father – as in fact Dickens had done himself. His own father was a naval clerk who had fallen into debt, which was punishable by prison in those days. He was put in Marshalsea Prison, and the family was so poor that young Charles had to work in a blacking factory, which he hated and felt very degraded by. It's here that he began thinking in earnest about the world, social injustices, and the struggles of working-class people.

From time to time, I like to walk north up to the Clerkenwell and Farringdon areas of the city, as they have so many fantastic places to eat and drink. This is a part of the city that tourists generally miss off, but many Londoners hold it very dear. Here you'll find the original Sadler's Wells Theatre, where a Matthew Bourne show is always the year's hot ticket. And here you'll also find the St. John restaurant, which is the first of three eateries from famed chef Fergus Henderson. It has a lovely yard in the middle where you can have cocktails and drinks before bounding off to, for example, the Barbican Centre.

This year at the Barbican sees Cate Blanchett and The Crown's Emma Corrin star in Anton Chekhov's The Seagull (February 26 – April 5), directed by Thomas Ostermeier. Around the corner in Islington is the Almeida Theatre, also a lodestar on London's theatrical map. The Ottolenghi restaurant is across the road, but do consider The Duke of Cambridge, a gastro-pub on St. Peter's Street. I used to go there for the vodka and plum juice but stayed for the food – at least four nights a week!

For a more experimental experience, head to the brand-new Sadler's Wells East in London's Olympic Park, Stratford, which opens on February 6. This dedicated dance theatre is located just across from Zaha Hadid's London Aquatics Centre and is a major cultural investment. This year will also see the launch of the Soho Theatre Walthamstow in East London, which is certain to draw in a local creative crowd.

Some Saturdays I like to spotlight shopping and wellness treatments because there's little time for that during the week. For example, I'll head to the Harrods Beauty Suites for a plumping facial by Orveda. The French biotech company recently opened its first 'maison' outside of Paris here, and it's sublime. I'll also grab the tallest olive breadstick from the Harrods Food Hall for breakfast and often a scone for home.

Now in Knightsbridge, you're on the right track for anything health-related. Check out The HVN, a new wellness centre for cosmetic acupuncture with Dr. John Tzagaris, or perhaps Rita Rakus on Hans Road for advanced facial technology and laser specialist Debbie Thomas in Chelsea. You may also want to book into 180, the new health club housed in 180 Studios, a creative hub with exhibitions, events, and talks located just off The Strand. Then stop by Reference Point, a brilliant little library, bookshop, and bar on the corner with Arundel Street. Incidentally, this is where Substack held its first meet-up for London's digital literary crowd.

February calls for long lazy lunches and any chance to meet a friend – for example, at Chisou, a Japanese restaurant in Mayfair that's essentially the insider's Nobu. Everything there is brilliant, but the bountiful horensō (spinach) salad is what will end up on your Instagram. Or make for Marylebone, which is home to three culinary institutions: Le Relais de Venise L'Entrecôte for salad and steak frites (the only thing on the menu), the ornate Austrian restaurant Fischer's for chicken schnitzel, and The Golden Hind fish and chip shop on Marylebone Lane.

But back to Sundays and, obviously, the Sunday roast. You'll enjoy a great one at The Holly Bush, which hides down a rickety lane in Hampstead. Or try The Flask in neighbouring Highgate. Afterwards, catch a film at the Everyman Hampstead, a cinema dating back to 1920. With its plush armchairs and sofa seating, it's perfect for a date on Valentine's Day.

Spitalfields Market is steeped in history and is a great spot for a pot of English tea.

For great 100% plant-based meals, head to the vegan newcomer Mallow.

Sundays are also synonymous with markets, but you have to rise early for the real experience. Otherwise it's the rather depressing scene of stalls closing down and empty flower markets. Notting Hill is the obvious choice, but East London blooms with its own cornucopia of treats. An authentic experience would be Petticoat Lane Market in E1, which dates back to the 1650s and is still today crammed with Cockney traders selling jewellery and leather goods.

Minutes away (and also a stone's throw from Liverpool Street Station) is Spitalfields Market, which has tons of food and drink to choose from. Here you get Michelin-level chefs opening pop-ups, but you also have mainstays such as Bleecker Burger, deemed 'the best burger in Britain'. You never know what pop-up will be next, and the market is completely unrecognisable from the vegetable market it originally was. Back in the 1990s it was quite run-down, with homeless people burning the vegetable crates at night to keep warm. A man here once gave my friend a piece of burning wood and said, 'We've kept this flame burning since the Great Fire of London, and it's never gone out.'

From the market, walk up to the famous Beigel Bake on Brick Lane, another institution that's open 24/7. I can confirm this, as my first flat in London lay opposite from it.

YOUR NEXT DESTINATION / February

Mallow at Borough Market

If you're interested in the London of the past, book a private tour of Dennis Severs' House, a restored Spitalfields home displaying a lived-in 18th-century lifestyle. It's intended as a 'historical imagination' of what life would have been like for a family of Huguenot silk weavers. Another museum that tourists tend to miss off is Sir John Soane's Museum, which sits next to Lincoln's Inn Fields in Holborn, as well as the Charles Dickens Museum just a short distance away.

London has changed a lot since the pandemic as businesses shuttered and 'working from home' meant many have moved out of London. Already before the pandemic, much had changed due to gentrification. But there are still lovable bits of London preserved in certain areas, and Bloomsbury is certainly one of them. If you're in this area, be sure to lounge in The Lamb on Lamb's Conduit Street, which is one of the best pubs in London. From there, walk down this cinematic street past all of the beautifully dressed shops – little independent traders from tailors to handmade clothing shops, but also several picturesque bars. So, it's shop-shop, then a lovely little restaurant, then shop-shop, lovely little bar, shop-shop, lovely little pub... A kind of picture-postcard dreamscape London.

Theobalds Road is close by, and there you'll find Fryer's Delight, a quintessential 1920s fish and chip shop. Right around the corner, on Red Lion Street, sits another of the best pubs in London – The Dolphin Tavern. It's a lovely old pub with nice booths, and probably the most interesting item on the walls is the stopped clock from when the building was bombed during the First World War. Walk a few steps further for one of the best Japanese sushi restaurants. Eat Tokyo is a very narrow canteen-style place, but it's easy to get a table and authentic bento box. Everything is very quick and rapier, and the food's exquisite.

This whole area of London is very interesting. For example, if you turn left (west), you've got Leather Lane, which is famous for its market running since the 1700s. Pick up a coffee from Prufrock and make haste to Hatton Garden (the next street over) and the diamond district. Serpentine through the shops selling jewels and you'll maybe get a glimpse down an alleyway to the London of the past. I once sat in a café here and, a few tables over, spotted a man with a loupe examining his gemstones. Extraordinary, really. It's a bit of the city that most visitors don't really get to see.

So, London in winter? By all means! This city truly offers an enchanting flurry of things to see, eat, and do.

Where are you most likely to meet with your authors for lunch?

I find that most authors want to come and see where we're based and have a nose around. So, we'll often meet in our office at Hackney Downs Studios – which is home to over 100 creative companies – and then maybe walk to Dusty Knuckle, a bakery in Dalston that makes the most incredible and messy sandwiches, or Papo's Bagels, which was set up by two New Yorkers who couldn't find proper bagels in London. For a nice lunch with wine and napkins, I'd book somewhere like Brawn on Columbia Road.

What's your favourite celebratory spot in London? Right now, my favourite fancy places are Sessions Arts Club in Clerkenwell and Mountain Restaurant in Soho. I've been to Sessions a few times and now know that it releases tables at 7 a.m., exactly 30 days before your desired date. So yes, getting a reservation might involve setting an alarm. But it's worth it. The front door is quite hidden, and then you're ushered into a lift up to the fourth floor of an 18th-century former courthouse that's now a listed building. The vibe is contemporary-art-meets-fading-grandeur-meets-tasty-food-and-wine. Mountain is newer and in Soho, so it's less 'hidden', but the food is incredible – creative and delicious.

Where are the best literary secrets in London? The Yellow Bittern is a lunch-only restaurant and bookshop near King's Cross. I haven't been there yet myself, but I've heard about it and am intrigued. It seats 18, the owner calls himself a 'chef poet', and the food served includes rustic hunks of soda bread, hearty stews, and crusty apple pie. It's named after an 18th-century Irish poem about a bird that couldn't crack the ice with its beak to get a drink – that's most of us Brits in January! It's small, old-school, and I'm up for going. I'll send a postcard to request a table – which is apparently how you're supposed to book...

Which London landmarks are worth the hype? I still find it uplifting to walk or cycle over London Bridge and look up and down the River Thames. The view is never the same and always feels epic. The Columbia Road Flower Market isn't so much a landmark as an experience. It's busy, chaotic, the traders are shouting all around, and these days you also have your pick of fancy coffee and pastries.

What are some of your favourite bookshops in London? The Tate Modern has four bookshops, and I'm not a fan just because they always have our books in stock (although it helps!), but there you'll find a beautifully curated selection of art, design, and lifestyle books. Also, Artwords on Broadway Market is an independent bookshop specialising in books and magazines on contemporary visual arts and culture. The range is quite broad and, again, just very well curated. There's also a bustling market at the weekend with tons of delicious food stalls.

Which upcoming exhibitions or performances are you most looking forward to?

This June marks the first SXSW (South by Southwest) event in London. I still haven't made it to the original event in Austin, Texas, despite it being on 'the list' for ever, alongside the Sundance Film Festival, so this will be much more convenient! The event is known for its legendary mix of culture, tech, creativity, and innovation – with talks, films, and live music – so I'm curious to see the lineup, not least as we've nominated two of our authors! It takes place in venues around Shoreditch from June 2 to 7.

Say you have a bicycle for the day. Where would you go? Lots of people don't like cycling around London because of all the traffic, but it has improved! We have cycle lanes, bus lanes, and tons of Lime bikes. That said, no one wants to be inhaling car fumes, so I'd recommend a lap around Olympic Park, which is the site of the new V&A museum, which will open on May 31, as well as Sadler's Wells, the BBC, and the London College of Fashion. From there you can cycle around Hackney Wick (book a dinner table at Darlings) or follow the River Lea to Clapton in Hackney. These days there are some brilliant food and drink options there – have a glass of fancy wine at 107 Wine Shop & Bar, then dinner at Lucky & Joy or My Neighbours the Dumplings, or order take-out from my favourite Vietnamese place, Hai Cafe.

TREASURE TROVE

Giulio Iacchetti is a leading figure in modern design, renowned for crafting innovative pieces for top clients and being at the forefront of contemporary design. In conversation with Baltic Outlook, he opens up about his personal passions for music and the sea and offers insight into the influences that shape his life and creative work.

The Italian designer Giulio Iacchetti is well known around the world for his classic household objects. His knives, spoons, brooms, hammers, vases, and other everyday items have a fresh and unexpected spin. Two of his designs, the multifunctional biodegradable Moscardino spoon-fork (created for the Pandora Design brand in collaboration with Matteo Ragni) and the Sfera manhole cover series (designed with Matteo Ragni for Montini), have made him a household name. He won Italy's top design prize, the Compasso d'Oro, in 2001 and again in 2014. People love the Moscardino tableware for its looks and how it works, and it's not just the Italian design scene that has taken notice – the tableware has even found its way into the permanent collection of the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA) in New York City.

Iacchetti has worked with many different brands, including Alessi, Danese, Meritalia, Sambonet, Moleskine, Fontana Arte, Foscarini, and Magis. He's also the artistic director of Abet Laminati and Dnd, a design brand for door handles. While Iacchetti's professional focus is on so-called industrial design, this is only part of the creative universe that occupies his mind and hands. The 58-year-old designer has exhibited and shown his work on his own at the Triennale Milano and received the Premio dei Premi innovation award from the Italian President. In 2012, he also launched Internoitaliano, a 'factory network' consisting of many artisan workshops where he designs and produces furniture and accessories inspired by the Italian way of living.

Iacchetti is a real go-getter. He's also a real researcher. He thinks about things a lot. Depending on the project, he's also an engineer, a mechanic, and a craftsman. He's always looking for new design ideas and at how craftsmanship and design interact. He believes that design should be accessible to everyone and isn't afraid to tackle less-explored topics, such as the symbolism of the cross or the phenomenon of bones, developing projects with surprising design facets. On top of that, Iacchetti is an excellent storyteller. With his great sense of humour, warmth, and spark in his eyes, he can deeply move and charm his audience, making listeners laugh until they cry, applaud until they're tired, and rise to their feet and shout: Bravo!

I saw all of this for myself when I went to his 'Lesson in Reverse' at the Palazzo dei Congressi in Bologna, which he presented to a group of design enthusiasts and students from various Italian creative schools. At the end of the lecture, the students swarmed around him like bees, asking him for selfies and group photos while eagerly touching and examining the product samples he had brought along. After all the handshakes, smiles, and chats, Iacchetti and I didn't hang about looking for a comfy place to sit and have a chat – that just wouldn't have been the vibe. Instead, we plonked ourselves down on the wide, decorative edge of the marble stairs at the entrance to the congress hall. And there we had a relaxed conversation about the designer's journey and how important it is to turn setbacks into successes.

First, I just wanted to say a massive thank you for your lecture. It's been ages since I felt such a strong connection between an audience and the main speaker – that is, you. The young people seemed to respond to every word, image, and movement from you. So, what does it mean to you to address the younger generation?

With his great sense of humour, warmth, and spark

move and charm

I guess you could say it's a kind of compensation. It's a way of making up for all the words I wish I'd heard during my own studies. I really missed that back then, so with this presentation, I'm trying to turn an experience I never had into one I would have loved to have had. I didn't have the opportunity to chat with colleagues, teachers, or people who were willing to share their experiences and talk about their work, life, and all that. So that's why now I share, I speak, I show, because I believe the younger generation really needs it.

You studied at Politecnico di Milano, right?

Yes, I studied at Politecnico, but after completing the first two years in the Faculty of Architecture and passing my exams, I dropped out. I didn't feel right there. I've always felt this period as a wound in my life's journey, because not completing something so important as my studies was a great disappointment, a defeat, a failure... That's why later I tried to transform this loss into something else, to demonstrate to myself and others that I could still fulfil my intention of becoming a designer, that I could do the work I love. Yes, I'm more of an

My path is always provocation. I look for places that challenge me to think autodidact. When I became a designer, I hadn't studied at specialised schools; it just happened.

These days, do you go anywhere to study design yourself? And where would you recommend others go?

There's one country in the world where I believe everything is well-designed, thought through, and harmonised, and that country is Japan. Whenever I can, I go there. Japan is my favourite destination. Every object or project solution there is interpreted with a certain aesthetic quality; everything is logical, deliberate, and executed for others. Japan has a concept of respecting every individual, which is why things are made intelligently, honouring time, the individual, and so on. Whether it's Tokyo, Osaka, or small towns, each place in Japan has its own intelligence code. It's a country where there's always something to learn.

As for seeing and exploring design in Europe, of course, lots of design is concentrated in Milan. It's always worth visiting the Triennale Milano as well as other important museums, exhibitions, and so on. But I believe that for us – designers and creative people – it's not that one place is better than another. What's most important is the curiosity in our eyes, the interest. Because there's something to see and learn in all our European cities.

How has your design language evolved? How much did you take from your time in Italy and the experience of its design school and past masters?

I'm so thankful for the opportunity to have learned from such amazing Italian design icons as Enzo Mari, Aldo Rossi, and Ettore Sottsass. Even though they had such different paths, they all helped me shape my own journey. They were such greats, such visionaries, and I've learned so much from them. But I also know that I'm not like them.

When I saw you on stage today, I thought your outfit was pretty interesting – a blue work jumpsuit. It's casual, industrial, but it's not really what you'd expect from a designer. What's your take on it? I really like dressing like this. It's a smart outfit, made from tough fabric that'll last. The blue is typical for metalworking mechanics – it's what the craftsmen who work in factories and workshops that specialise in metal wear. If you've noticed, specialists from other professions wear different-coloured outfits. In woodworking, for example, they wear green jumpsuits. My dad was a worker (l'operaio) and I've made loads of stuff with my own hands, so deep down I feel like a skilled labourer.

You create objects that we use all the time: handles, household items, tableware... How do you make the connection between an object and the person using it?

Understanding objects is a huge part of my life. I often say 'listen to objects'. It might sound a bit weird, but I truly believe that objects have something to say. The question is, do we want to listen and hear what they're saying?

Everyone's got their own thing going on, but my job is to listen to objects. After all, we live in a world of objects – they came before us. People made them while thinking about us. Designers have a clear mission: to create objects that people will use long after they're gone. That's a pretty cool thing, you know? It's just like a writer who leaves a book behind, or a songwriter leaves a song, or an artist leaves a work of art. A designer leaves things that everyone will use. And actually, designers have a bigger responsibility, because they need to understand who made the object before them and why. They need to know the history of objects to create new ones.

Along with learning and gaining experience, what else do you need in order to create your ingenious objects? Balance, brainstorming, solitude, conversations? Balance is not essential to me. My path is always provocation. I look for places that challenge me to think, that create doubt... Doubt, in general, is a wonderful dimension of life, especially when combined with instability, with the feeling that you're not satisfied.

I'm not interested in inner peace. Instead, I constantly search for the sensations of things. To be unsatisfied, to doubt – that's the dimension of life I greatly value. I like to search, I like to see... maybe even too much, but that's the way I am.

You've bagged Italy's top design accolade, the Compasso d'Oro, for not one but two of your everyday objects. When you think about how powerful Italian design is, it seems that this kind of recognition is reserved for only the chosen few. Do you remember the emotions? When I got the award for the Moscardino spoon-fork, I remember I was really happy and excited. It was a big and unexpected surprise for us, but I also felt like the work of a designer had become my job. I felt like designing had finally become my life's purpose. So, this award was a massive thing for my career.

Before the award, I was doing the same job, creating objects, but it didn't feel like the work had real substance; it was more like a joke or a hobby. But after receiving the Compasso d'Oro, I realised that this was my choice, my path. And that it was the right one.

What's your relationship with the many objects you've created? Do you have a special connection with any of them?

Typically, when people are asked this question, they say that the most important thing is what they're going to create in the future. To be honest, it's a bit of a cliché and kind of a déjà vu moment. But there's some truth in it, too. Once you've made something, you don't really think about it anymore.

It's like when you reach production and start selling your product – you forget all about it. At that point, it's not yours anymore. Sure, you designed it, but now it's owned and used by many others. It's not just yours anymore, because it belongs to loads of other people.

But the idea that sparks the design of a new object, the first sketch that's still only in your mind and hasn't been shared with anyone else yet – that's where the real excitement lies! There's nothing quite like the moment when an idea is still in your head, when it's still all yours, when it's just starting to take shape...

Does the spark of humour, which you're famous for among your colleagues, help you in your work and in life as well?

Humour brings a smile. It's not a phenomenon that provokes crude laughter or vulgar laughing. Instead, a bit of self-deprecating humour or irony lightens

'It's worth mentioning that humour and irony are a hallmark of Italian design,' says Iacchetti in this interview with Baltic Outlook.

Although I was never a big fan of the sea, I've recently started to appreciate it everything; it puts things in their place, makes an object friendly, approachable, and ultimately, yours. Humour helps you let go of the notion that you're overly important or that you've done something infinitely significant... When you smile, you open up to others, you show that you don't have those barriers of self-importance.

Objects that help bring a smile carry great power. It's also worth mentioning that humour and irony are a hallmark of Italian design. Look at the Castiglioni brothers [Achille, Pier Giacomo, and Livio Castiglioni – Italian architects and designers who made significant contributions to the fields of lighting, furniture design, and architecture in the 20th century – Ed.], Bruno Munari, and others – from the perspective of humour, they were true heroes, because they created objects that make people smile. Even the names of their objects often had a playful and ironic touch.

What else, besides work and design, are you passionate about?

I love playing the double bass. I started playing it when I was a kid, but last year I enrolled in the conservatory for a year to professionally learn the art of playing the double bass. The double bass is my passion, and from time to time I enjoy playing it together with my children, too.

I've read about another love of yours – a house in Sardinia. Is it true that you're ready to say goodbye to Milan and move there with your family?

We are in Milan and will stay here, as this city is tied to our work, but we definitely see our future in Sardinia. I'm not originally from Sardinia, but I now feel deeply connected to it. Perhaps that's because it's a magical place where I immediately found a sense of belonging. In Sardinia, we've discovered a more respectful dimension of life – there's the sea, the opportunity to cultivate the land, to buy very high-quality fruits and vegetables, and so on. Our home is by the sea, and although I was never a big fan of the sea, I've recently started to appreciate it... Yes, you could say it's late in life, but many things have come to me with a bit of delay... I started my design work late, and children came into our family after we'd already reached a certain age. The same goes for the sea.

Yes, I have such a car, a Citroën 2CV, made in 1986. I use it in Sardinia, because it's no longer allowed in Milan. I've wanted this car since childhood, and it chose me as much as I chose it – it truly forms part of my life. Without a doubt. I love everything about this car – the existentialism it represents, the simplicity in which I see true luxury. Plus, this car teaches me many things. bo

MOROCCAN EYE CANDY

Marrakesh is a real treat for aesthetes and bon vivants

Stunning Islamic architecture gives Marrakesh its ‘Red City’ moniker, while riads conceal serene courtyards that contrast sharply with the medina’s vibrant chaos. Here, donkeys, scooter riders, pomegranate sellers, and stray cats jostle for space under the sun, creating a cinematic chaos worthy of an A-list spy thriller.

Beyond the medina, the rising charm of the so-called New Town – the Gueliz district – adds a fresh layer to the city. It boasts a fusion of well-preserved traditional craftsmanship with a flourishing contemporary art scene and restaurants that put bold, modern spins on one of the world’s richest cuisines. Add to that the heady aroma of orange blossoms drifting through gardens and souks, paired with the hauntingly beautiful calls to prayer, and it’s easy to see why Marrakesh, a magnet for 1970s icons such as the Rolling Stones and Talitha and John Paul Getty Jr., remains as enchanting as ever.

The Pierre Bergé Museum of Berber Arts has breathed new life into the former painting studio of the artist Jacques Majorelle.

The medina's labyrinth-like streets

TIMELESS AND CUTTING-EDGE

Marrakesh's architectural canvas is a striking fusion of traditional Islamic and Berber styles. No design-savvy traveller can leave without visiting the iconic Jardins Majorelle, a stunning complex that's home to Yves Saint Laurent's cobalt blue villa-turned-museum, the Pierre Bergé Museum of Berber Arts, and enchanting gardens. Originally created by painter Jacques Majorelle, the site was rescued in the 1980s by Saint Laurent and his partner, Pierre Bergé. The couple preserved the garden and converted the space into a museum of Islamic art. Designed by visionary Bill Willis, an American who revolutionised Moroccan aesthetics by merging local craftsmanship with modern luxury, the garden became synonymous with contemporary Moroccan design. Later, in 2011, the museum was repurposed to focus on Berber art.

The site's winding pathways and vibrant structures combine Art Deco and Moorish influences, making it a visual feast. Nearby is the YSL Museum, which opened in 2017 and showcases haute couture collections that narrate the iconic designer's creative journey. Akin to a woven fabric, this monumental building is the work of the French architect duo Studio KO, which also designed the interior for the Sahbi Sahbi restaurant and the grand, Art Deco-style Grand Café de La Poste.

For those willing to haggle and make space in their luggage, the medina's souks are treasure troves. Almost every stall offers pottery, rugs, and other design curiosities. Bab el Khemis, a lively daily flea market, sells everything from vintage lamps to jewellery, though you'll need to sift through old phones and cracked mirrors to unearth the true gems. For fabric lovers, Souk des Teinturiers brims with colourful textiles, while Souk Haddadine caters to blacksmithing enthusiasts, with iron tableware and large items fit for cargo. For a calmer, more structured experience, Souk Cherifia features a department store-like layout, while the government-run Ensemble Artisanal delivers a curated selection of traditional crafts with fixed prices.

HERITAGE MEETS CONTEMPORARY

The 1-54 Contemporary African Art Fair, which takes place in late January and early February, has made its way onto numerous 'global cultural highlights of 2025' lists, firmly proving Marrakesh's place on the contemporary art map.

For those looking to dive into the local art scene, Rue Tariq Bnou Ziad in the Gueliz district is an excellent starting point. This vibrant street is home to some of the city's most significant galleries: Galerie 38, which specialises in sub-Saharan art; L'Blassa Art Space, which showcases both international and Moroccan artists while offering a welcoming coworking space next door; and Galerie Siniya28, with its striking design of vivid blue and spiked white walls and dedication to supporting emerging talent and making art more accessible. Another must-see is the Casablanca-based Loft Art Gallery's second location on Boulevard el Mansour Eddahbi in Marrakesh, which is worth visiting not just for the art but also for its expansive rooftop terrace.

For a history lesson, drop in at the Marrakesh Museum, which is housed in the serene Menebhi Palace and offers a deep dive into Morocco's cultural heritage.

Alternatively, the Maison de la Photographie de Marrakech provides a more intimate experience, showcasing historical photographs of the country within the walls of a charming mansion.

While the medina is a cultural experience and architectural masterpiece in and of itself, it hides many more wonders. The Madrasa Ben Youssef, a 14th-century Islamic school and UNESCO World Heritage Site, features an exquisite courtyard with an intricate mosaic pool and ornately carved wooden windows high above. It's unlikely anyone can leave without feeling awe – or at least taking a few beautiful pictures.

For a more tranquil escape, visit Le Jardin Secret, a recently restored 19th-century palace-turned-botanical-haven. This sanctuary boasts meandering pathways, pavilions, and a serene atmosphere. Bonus: the tower offers spectacular views of the medina.

Another captivating landmark is La Bahia Palace, built in the 1860s by Grand Vizier Si Moussa and later expanded by his son Abu 'Bou' Ahmed to include a magnificent courtyard for his 24 wives. Now a state-managed tourist site, it remains a testament to opulence and history.

The Bahia Palace offers a tranquil respite from the buzz of the medina.

GASTRONOMIC HEAVEN

ThirtyFive serves coffee
along with vinyl tunes.Every meal begins with a selection of small Moroccan
salads.

Calling Moroccan cuisine one of the world's most distinct is no exaggeration. From dawn to dusk, meals brim with spices and burst with colour. Breakfast typically includes a steaming, aromatic mint tea alongside a spread of breads, cheeses, and nibbles such as msemmen (layered pancakes served with jams, honey, or divine almond butter infused with honey). While most riads offer solid morning spreads, Café des Épices elevates breakfast with its rooftop views of the medina's bustling charm.

Mint tea, dubbed 'Berber whiskey' in homage to Morocco's indigenous people, is the national drink. Commonly served at breakfast, between meals, and as a welcoming gesture, it's theatrically poured from a height to aerate it and enhance its flavour, creating a frothy 'crown'. Can't imagine your day without coffee? The new part of the city hosts some decent specialty coffee spots. Among them is ThirtyFive, a minimalist space of grey concrete, black metal, and vinyl tunes – like something straight off the streets of Berlin or Copenhagen.

Back in the medina, street vendors tempt passersby with smoky kebabs, grilled sardines, and maakouda, or deep-fried potato balls. For a sweet fix, try chebakia (honey-soaked fried dough) or sellou (a crumbly mix of roasted flour, nuts, and spices).

For lunch, couscous reigns supreme, especially on Fridays. This deeply rooted tradition unites families after Jumu'ah (Friday prayers), when they share a pot of couscous piled with stewed vegetables, chickpeas, tender meat, saffron, turmeric, and raisins. A wonderful spot to partake in such a meal is Amal Centre, a women's training centre supporting vulnerable women, including those affected by the 2023 earthquake. Its tranquil garden serves up homestyle lunches with a purpose.

Another female-led gem – ideal for dinner – is Sahbi Sahbi. Honouring the tradition of passing down recipes through the generations, it offers an intimate candlelit setting and a centrepiece oven producing everything from tagines to lamb shoulders. These are classic dishes with sophisticated flair.

Some of the most interesting dining spots in the city are the ones where local flavours are brought into dialogue with another cuisine, such as Mizaan, which creatively blends Moroccan and Mediterranean influences, and Naranj, which adds a dash of Beirut's vibrant culinary spirit to the heart of the medina.

WELLNESS AND HOSPITALITY

For design enthusiasts, the Izza boutique hotel is a standout option in Marrakesh. Its fourteen rooms are spread across three tranquil courtyards, one featuring a heated pool that's perfect for a swim year-round. Inspired by the trailblazing designer Bill Willis, every detail celebrates local craftsmanship. The hotel even boasts a bespoke perfume, crafted in collaboration with a local perfumery. Each suite is unique and pays homage to a creative figure associated with Marrakesh – such as Yves' room, a pink-hued space overlooking the pool; and Grace Jones' room, which exudes bold, exotic energy. In addition to a hammam, a dreamy library, and a rooftop restaurant highlighting local and seasonal flavours alongside European influences, the hotel's standout feature is an extraordinary global art collection that includes over 300 pieces of contemporary and digital art (and one of the largest NFT collections) featuring such renowned works as photographs from Leila Alaoui's renowned Les Marocains series.

Another design-forward haven is Maison Brummell Majorelle, a newly built terracotta-hued boutique hotel that nevertheless honours Morocco's rich architectural traditions. With eight rooms and a stunning marble-clad hammam, the project was shortlisted for the Dezeen Awards 2024. Brummell's smaller project in a 19th-century riad within the medina is a more modest yet equally charming five-room stay.

Hammams are about more than just pampering. Deeply woven into the local culture and identity, they're a time-honoured ritual that celebrates natural, locally sourced beauty products and techniques. These oases of calm, with their mosaic-tiled interiors, aromatic black soap scrubs, exfoliation, and essential-oil massages, are a feast for the senses. To fully indulge, set aside a day for the multi-step process, which often culminates in soaking in beautifully tiled pools.

Marrakesh offers hammams to suit every taste and a wide range of budgets. Les Bains d'Orient combines a modern, airy ambience with classic Moroccan steam-bath rituals. But for a truly luxurious indulgence, Royal Mansour is the place to be. Set within King Mohammed VI's former estate, the spa is not just part of the hotel of the same name; it's a destination in its own right. Spanning three opulent floors, it offers private and semi-private hammam suites alongside a variety of treatments, from ceremonial massages and foot reflexology to hair care and barber services. bo

HOME OF THE WILD WIND

Nestled among majestic pine forests in the untamed beauty of Finnish Lapland, Villa Viima – which means ‘wild wind’ in Finnish – is a tranquil escape designed to harmonise with its magnificent surroundings. ‘Breathtaking, windy, snowy’ is how PAVE Architects, the creative minds behind the architecture and interior design, describe the location. Lead architect Emilia Pikkarainen highlights its unparalleled comfort: ‘The villa offers a peaceful escape, yet the bustling centre of Levi, with its year-round activities such as downhill and cross-country skiing, hiking, and cycling, is only a few minutes’ drive away. It’s the perfect setting for relaxed family get-togethers and an active lifestyle.’

▲ Modern luxury and nature blend seamlessly in every detail of the villa. The owner wanted architecture in harmony with the environment, natural and durable materials such as oak and stone, and a Scandinavian-style interior.

This principle extends to the basement level, the centrepiece of which is a versatile lounge and bar area. Whether hosting a film night or enjoying a relaxing cocktail by the fireplace, this space caters for a variety of moods and moments.

► The villa is built from rough kelo wood logs – old, upright dried trees that have shed their bark. It's a very durable building material that blends beautifully with the surrounding trees. The logs can measure up to 30 to 50 centimetres in diameter. They bring a warm feeling to a room and provide good acoustics. The kitchen furniture is also custom made.

▲ The primary bedroom has a skylight to see the aurora borealis. 'The most important element in local architecture is nature,' says Pikkarainen. 'Traditional houses in Levi are A-shaped log houses with casement windows. Villa Viima uses these elements in a modern way. The gabled roof is asymmetrical and the openings have landscape windows.'

◀ 'The sauna is a ritual. First you enter through a cave-like dressing room to a staircase and a picture window that takes up the entire wall, then you go upstairs to the traditional wooden sauna. For cooling off, there's another entrance that leads to a dressing room and directly to the terrace and Jacuzzi,' explains the architect. The sauna complex is located in the basement, along with the lounge and bar area. The dressing room and bathroom have stone-tiled floors and walls. bo

SUV REINVENTED

What does an affordable compact electric car look like according to the Koreans?

For years, industry experts have pointed out that the true breakthrough in electric mobility would come from smaller, more affordable vehicles rather than high-priced luxury models. Now, that moment has finally arrived: a new wave of compact electric cars is emerging, and one model in particular is poised to redefine the segment. Meet the Kia EV3 – a crossover that not only challenges traditional notions of what a compact EV should be but also delivers the style, performance, and practicality everyday drivers have been waiting for.

Europe’s compact segment, often referred to as the ‘Golf class’, has always been synonymous with efficient dimensions, refined driving dynamics, and solid value. However, changing consumer preferences and the electrification trend have fundamentally reshaped this category. Emissions regulations and the push for sustainable mobility have forced automakers to think differently, and few have embraced this challenge as enthusiastically as Kia.

By taking a fresh perspective rather than simply electrifying older platforms, Kia set out to develop a vehicle that preserves the best qualities of a compact car – affordability, ease of driving, and efficient use of space – while elevating the design, technology, and range to levels typically reserved for pricier offerings. The EV3 perfectly embodies this strategy: it’s an attainable crossover that feels at home in urban settings yet offers enough range and comfort to conquer longer journeys.

Where earlier generations of compact electric cars often fell short on range, the EV3 comes armed with multiple battery options that change perceptions about how far a small EV can go. The standard battery offers a substantial capacity, while a larger, Long Range variant can provide up to 605 kilometres of travel (according to WLTP measurements). That’s more than enough to handle most drivers’ everyday needs – grocery runs, school drop-offs, etc. – as well as spontaneous weekend getaways.

Even before the EV3 reached many customers, it had garnered a string of prestigious awards. The celebrated magazine Top Gear honoured it with the Crossover of the Year title, while the influential European contest European Car Of The Year recognised the EV3 as the standout in the affordable electric car category. These achievements underscore the consensus among automotive experts that Kia has succeeded in creating an appealing mix of functionality, range, and design at a price point that puts electric driving within reach of a broader audience.

Vitoldas Milius, the editor-in-chief of Auto Bild Lithuania and a jury member for the prestigious German award Das Goldene Lenkrad (Golden Steering Wheel), has personally put the EV3 to the test. ‘Our role at Auto Bild is to analyse cars critically, acknowledging their strengths and weaknesses. With the EV3, though, finding genuine flaws was surprisingly difficult,’ he explains. ‘Whether you look at it from the angle of range, price, or practicality, it hits a remarkable balance that speaks to the expertise behind its design.’

Kia’s growth in the EV market has been nothing short of remarkable. Earlier models showcased the brand’s ability to combine competitive range and solid driving dynamics with futuristic designs, solidifying its reputation as a front-runner in this ever-evolving landscape. Now, with the EV3, Kia takes a direct aim at the mainstream, proving that going electric doesn’t require splurging on a deluxe badge or compromising on day-to-day usability.

In essence, the EV3 continues a successful formula: forward-thinking technology, robust engineering, and user-centric design, all offered at a compelling price. This formula has powered Kia’s rise to prominence in electric mobility – a trajectory that shows no signs of slowing down.

As global trends steer toward greener solutions, the EV3 arrives at precisely the right moment. Car buyers seeking to transition from internal combustion to electric can now opt for a cost-conscious yet truly modern model – one that doesn’t look or feel like a compromise. Whether you’re commuting to work or embarking on a cross-country journey, the EV3 has the specs, comfort, and safety features to take you there with minimal fuss.

There’s no denying the importance of an accessible entry point into the EV world. Unlike luxury models that flaunt sky-high prices and sometimes overshadow real practicality, the EV3 reaffirms that the most significant breakthroughs often stem from intelligent engineering aimed at the everyday driver. By focusing on range, comfort, and well-crafted details, Kia has created a compact electric crossover that resonates with those who want the electric future now – without breaking the bank.

In short, if you’ve been longing for a compact electric car that hits all the right notes – space, driving enjoyment, range, and affordability – the EV3 shines as a triumphant testament to how Kia envisions the future. With accolades already pouring in and early drives confirming its capabilities, this model doesn’t just reinvent the concept of a small family car; it showcases how the electric revolution can be welcoming, exciting, and genuinely attainable for everyone.

kia.lv / kila.lt / kia.ee

The Kia EV3 has a combined range of up to 605 km (WLTP), a 10–80% charging time of 29 minutes (350kW), and 460 litres of luggage space. The car’s price starts at EUR 39,990.

Bariatric surgery

While some people are able to shed excess weight through dietary restriction, spa procedures, and exercise, others may need medical intervention to reach the same result. Bariatric surgery, or weight loss surgery, makes it possible for patients to eat significantly smaller portions of food while at the same time provide their body with the nutrients it needs. It is possible to lose up to 70% of excess weight within a year after surgery, with long-term success achieved in 93% of cases, according to the latest research.

Obesity is frequently accompanied by dangerous conditions, including Type 2 diabetes, sleep apnoea, depression, arterial hypertension (high blood pressure), joint and back pain, heartburn, and polycystic ovary syndrome, which is a cause of infertility.

There are three types of bariatric surgery. A surgeon can recommend a certain type of surgery, taking into account the patient's weight, general health, and the results of pre-operative examinations. The final decision is made by the patient together with the surgeon.

GASTRIC BYPASS SURGERY

Gastric bypass surgery is used to treat obesity. The operation is performed laparoscopically, with a video camera and instruments inserted into the abdomen through small, 1.5-centimetre incisions. A 'small stomach' and a 'large stomach' are created using modern electronic surgical staplers. The small stomach is then attached to the intestinal tract, bypassing the large stomach and a third of the upper part of the small intestine. The small stomach does not become a reservoir for food; instead, the food travels straight to the small intestine, where the digestive process begins and appetite-regulating hormones are released. These in turn signal the brain to feel full, because the food is already in the digestive phase of the small intestine.

The brain and hormones also influence other organs, such as the liver, pancreas, and kidneys, which rebalance the patient's metabolism towards energy expenditure. The large stomach, duodenum, and part of the small intestine continue to take part in digestion by secreting digestive juices, bile, and other substances. Another connection is made between the loops of the small intestine so that there is no reflux of bile into the small stomach.

PRICE:

iVF Riga: EUR 4550 (for residents EUR 3990)
AIWA Clinic: EUR 4043 (surgery price only; for residents EUR 3465)
Jūrmala Hospital: from EUR 3800

GASTRIC SLEEVE SURGERY

During gastric sleeve surgery, or vertical sleeve gastrectomy, most of the stomach (approximately 80% of its volume) is removed, thus also removing a large part of the stomach's endocrine cells, which produce ghrelin, the so-called hunger hormone. The volume of the new stomach is only about 300 millilitres, so it fills and discharges into the duodenum more quickly. Food passes more quickly into the small intestine, which in turn stimulates the 'satiety hormones'. This results in the patient feeling full sooner.

This procedure is technically simpler than gastric bypass surgery, as there is no need to make additional connections between the intestine and the stomach. Less gastrointestinal tract manipulation means fewer potential complications immediately following the surgery. In the first few days after surgery, the stomach adapts to its new shape and patients tend to experience discomfort in the form of nausea and, less frequently, vomiting. This passes within a couple of days. In rare cases, there may be three to five days of minimal discomfort.

PRICE:

iVF Riga: EUR 4550 (for residents EUR 3990)
AIWA Clinic: EUR 4043 (surgery price only; for residents EUR 3465)
Jūrmala Hospital: from EUR 3800

* Price includes: pre-operative examinations (can also be performed elsewhere, approximate price from the total amount is EUR 400), general anaesthesia, bariatric surgery, 2 days of bed rest after surgery. Necessary pre-operative examinations can also be performed elsewhere.

MINI GASTRIC BYPASS SURGERY

This procedure is relatively newer, simpler, and less invasive than traditional gastric bypass surgery, involving a single anastomosis (connection) of the intestine to the stomach instead of two. The length of the surgery is also shorter.

Mini gastric bypass surgery helps to achieve lasting weight loss in two ways. First, when the patient eats, the now small stomach fills up quickly, signalling to the brain that the patient feels full with smaller portions of food. Second, the food bypasses part of the small intestine to reduce the amount absorbed.

PRICE:

iVF Riga: EUR 4550 (for residents EUR 3990)
AIWA Clinic: EUR 4043 (surgery price only; for residents EUR 3465)

SUGGESTIONS:

- Patients require consultation, along with the supervision and support of a nutritionist, both before and after surgery.
- Support from a psychologist/psychotherapist is also recommended.
- After surgery, patients must regularly take vitamin B and D as well as calcium (and in some cases, iron) supplements.
- Blood tests should be carried out for possible vitamin deficiencies.
- Patients should follow their specialist's instructions regarding lifestyle changes to avoid possible post-operative complications.
- Patients must follow a liquid diet for three weeks after surgery.

ZIVJU LETE – INSPIRED BY THE SEA

A centuries-old bond with the sea and fishing is an integral part of Baltic culture. Some time ago, Latvians even had ‘fish day’ once a week, on Thursdays. The ethos behind Zivju Lete is to make every day a fish day!

Born from the love of seafood and Latvia’s fishing heritage, Zivju Lete first opened its doors in 2015. The concept of a place specialising in fish – something that was lacking on Riga’s gastronomic scene – was an instant success. First, the restaurant offered a small menu that changed regularly depending on the catch of the day. But the demand for seafood delicacies has been growing, and in 2018 Zivju Lete relocated to new, more spacious premises.

The new restaurant has introduced a more varied menu, where everyone can find a dish to their liking. Zivju Lete’s cuisine combines the best of fish and seafood recipes, both local and international. The menu features well-known classics like tartares, fish soups, mussels, and seafood sauté as well as some regional specialties, such as Baltic herring and sprats. The main goal of Zivju Lete’s cooking style is to showcase the seafood’s beauty without over-complicating its natural flavour. Recently, the specially invited chef from Italy, Andrea Salvatori, has added flawless Mediterranean flair to the restaurant’s cuisine with signature grilled dishes.

An actual zivju lete (or ‘fish counter’) forms the centrepiece of the open-plan kitchen. Here the best of the sea is displayed, from local fish to exotic seafood. What sets Zivju Lete apart is that it offers all of this at a reasonable price point. Whether it’s the finer end of the spectrum, like oysters and lobster, or fish brought by local fishmongers – seafood can and must be enjoyed every day. To fulfil this initiative, Zivju Lete has created a menu that includes an extensive choice of foods, including the simple fish and chips with cod.

The laid-back and casual atmosphere is also imprinted in Zivju Lete’s design. Located in one of the most beautiful and prestigious parts of Riga, the restaurant’s interior is far from snobby or pretentious. A combination of fishing-boat décor, handmade wood furniture, vintage glass tiles, and unique design elements make for a cheerful, coastal vibe. In fact, when visiting Zivju Lete, one can almost hear the waves and expect the fisherman whose tattoos inspired the restaurant’s wall painting to walk in through the door at any given moment.

OLIVIA RESTAURANT

AN UNFORGETTABLE GASTRONOMY EXPERIENCE

Mediterranean cuisine with hints of Scandinavian flavour.

For more than three years now, Olivia Restaurant has been welcoming Rigans and guests to the city with a combination of Mediterranean and Northern traditions and foods that are not available anywhere else in Latvia.

In creating the menu, the team at Olivia Restaurant has taken inspiration from French, Italian, Greek, and Spanish gastronomic traditions, and has also included hints of Asian flavours and combined everything with the chef’s own passion for experimental cuisine. However, the team always pays the most attention to the ingredients they use – they must be not only seasonal but also clean and organically grown. ‘Fresh produce and ingredients are the most important thing. They must be not only correctly grown, obtained, and delivered but also be processed correctly in our kitchen,’ says the chef. ‘Therefore our task is to find produce and meats of excellent quality, prepare them with respect, and serve them in an agreeable setting. In addition, it’s important for us to give thought to each ingredient, from the fish and meat all the way to the mushrooms and berries, which are, for example, gathered in the forests of northern Finland. If each of the ingredients in a dish is of the highest quality, then the meal is truly delicious and enjoyable.’

Olivia Restaurant is distinct not only for its high-quality produce and unique flavours and manner of preparation, but also for its general philosophy. Each food on the menu has a story of its own. The main menu highlights fish and seafood: the Mediterranean turbot is from the French coast, where it is raised on an organic fish farm, while the North Sea cod is caught in the Barents Sea and the shrimp are supplied from Canada. The swordfish comes from the Atlantic Ocean and sometimes takes more than 20 hours to be delivered to the restaurant. Olivia Restaurant is the only restaurant in Latvia to have been granted an official catch quota for bluefin tuna, leading its restaurant team to create a unique concept for Riga – a tuna menu.

The Olivia Restaurant team has also kept meat lovers in mind. Most of its meats come from Ireland because in addition to having been quality meat producers for many generations, the Irish are also able to ensure that the meat delivered to the restaurant is organically grown, tender, juicy, and full of flavour.

The dessert menu at Olivia Restaurant is not large, but each of the dishes contains refined, nuanced flavours that might even recall childhood. One of the favourite desserts at the restaurant is the caramelised Brunost, or cheese cream with cloudberry from the Arctic – guests call it an absolute masterpiece. Another highlight is the chocolate brownie with black garlic and lingonberry sauce, which once again confirms the chef’s tendency to not shy away from experimenting with various flavours and manners of preparation. It is precisely for this reason that the menu at Olivia Restaurant often features fermented products made on site at the restaurant, including nuts, egg yolks, and kombucha, which features in several sauces.

Olivia Restaurant is located in a two-storey wooden building dating to the 19th century in the heart of Riga’s Art Nouveau district. The restaurant has taken care not only with its gastronomic offer but also its visual image. Naturally, the exterior attracts attention, but so does the well-considered interior with its subtle colours, brick walls, velvet, copper, wood, and the romance of an attic space. Because Olivia Restaurant can accommodate up to 100 guests, the restaurant’s unforced informal atmosphere is ideal for meetings with friends and romantic dinners as well as for business meetings and larger celebrations.

Innsbruck on the

the majestic Alps

The picturesque village of Hallstatt, just over an hour's drive away from Salzburg

EXPLORE TWO AUSTRIAN GEMS: SALZBURG AND INNSBRUCK!

When it comes to skiing, two Austrian cities often top the list: Innsbruck, perched in the mountainous west of the country, and Salzburg, nestled in central Austria. Each offers a unique winter experience, so which one to choose? Let's dive into both!

Innsbruck is a haven for outdoor enthusiasts. Enveloped by towering Alpine peaks, it combines an active lifestyle with urban charm. With its pastel-coloured buildings, cosy cafés, and warming Tyrolean food, the city itself offers a welcoming vibe that's perfect for travellers who love to mix adventure with relaxation.

Salzburg, in contrast, takes another angle, thriving on culture, history, and a romantic winter ambience. It's famous for its Baroque-style architecture, legacy of classical music, and as the backdrop for The Sound of Music. Salzburg's picturesque Old Town and snow-dusted hills make for a storybook setting. Travellers can soak up the city's artistic spirit through concerts, horse-drawn carriage rides, and leisurely strolls along cobblestone streets.

For skiers, both Innsbruck and Salzburg offer excellent options. In Innsbruck, skiing and winter sports are within easy reach, thanks to Olympia SkiWorld Innsbruck – a network of nine ski resorts, including Axamer Lizum and Stubai Glacier, offering over 300 kilometres of trails. One standout location is Nordkette, a ski area accessible directly from the city via cable car and featuring challenging runs and panoramic views. Families and beginners, meanwhile, can enjoy the gentle pistes at Muttereralm.

While it's not a ski town itself, Salzburg serves as a gateway to some of Austria's top ski regions. For example, the Ski Amadé region, with its 760 kilometres of slopes, is just a short drive away. Highlights include Saalbach-Hinterglemm's Skicircus, which boasts 270 kilometres of interconnected trails, and Flachau, which is known for its modern lifts and family-friendly pistes. For glacier skiing and dramatic Alpine scenery, Zell am See-Kaprun is another excellent option, featuring runs on the Kitzsteinhorn Glacier.

But why choose between these cities when you can have both? Just a scenic two-hour drive separates Innsbruck and Salzburg, making it easy to combine a visit to both. Fly from Riga once a week and from Tallinn once a week – to Salzburg from EUR 105* one way, and from Riga to Innsbruck from EUR 75* one way.

airBaltic SUCCESSFULLY TESTS STARLINK INTERNET

In early January, airBaltic successfully completed a test flight with SpaceX's Starlink high-speed internet aboard its Airbus A220-300 aircraft. Departing from Riga, the flight evaluated the Starlink aero terminal and connection quality as part of the airline's certification process with the European Union Aviation Safety Agency. This is a game-changer in the future of air travel, and airBaltic is proud to lead the way in Europe and be the first airline in this region to offer Starlink's reliable high-speed internet free of charge. Installation on the fleet is expected to begin in Q1 of 2025, and Starlink will provide internet access from boarding to landing – no logins or hassle involved.

THE UNIQUE DESIGN OF airBaltic's 50TH A220-300

This month, airBaltic proudly announces the arrival of its 50th Airbus A220-300 aircraft, which features a striking livery inspired by Baltic heritage and nature. Designed through a global contest with 840 design entries, the winning artwork showcases a girl soaring through the clouds, adorned with the Latvian flag and a traditional wreath. Elements such as a ladybug, swallow, and stork celebrate the rich nature and traditions of Latvia, Estonia, and Lithuania. The livery was painted at the Airbus facility in Mirabel, Canada, and the aircraft officially joins airBaltic's fleet in February 2025.

Why we choose airBaltic

airBaltic is a convenient choice for many large businesses whose international operations require frequent flying. Our beloved clients share their favourite perks of airBaltic's corporate client programme.

The Latvian Football Federation is one of the key organisations that proudly carry Latvia's name out into the world, as it is the only organisation in Latvia that is recognised by such football leaders as UEFA and FIFA. Founded in 1921, the federation currently manages 14 national teams, including futsal, and numerous local clubs whose players also play at the European level. In 2025, the federation is eagerly looking forward to playing against England at the prestigious Wembley Stadium.

Playing football goes hand in hand with frequent travel. Friendly matches and championships often take place abroad, and the organisation's management frequently has to travel to international headquarters. Someone from the federation – be it football players or management – is always up in the sky. As the federation's president Vadims Lāšenko reveals, direct connections and convenient flight times are crucial to getting to destinations on time and without feeling tired. Most frequently the federation's management travels to the FIFA and UEFA bureaus in Zurich and near Geneva, as well as to Brussels for discussions regarding European Union funding to develop Latvia's football infrastructure. 'We're extremely lucky to be in the centre of the Baltics and able to reach all our destinations directly,' Lāšenko adds. airBaltic is also a convenient choice for teams flying to Riga to compete.

Lāšenko also emphasises the great level of service and comfort airBaltic provides and says that the corporate client programme brings that comfort to a whole new level. Fast-track security and the business lounge for comfortably preparing for a flight are only a few of the things he appreciates. 'airBaltic is a very flexible airline. We've even been able to swiftly change a flight time for the national team to get to a game on time,' he remarks. Likewise, booking tickets through a designated client manager makes it easy to arrange travel for large groups of travellers.

- ▶ Affordable ticket prices

In addition to flexibility and the convenient range of destinations and flight times, the Latvian Football Federation appreciates the larger baggage allowance that comes with being part of the corporate client programme. When the whole team plus the supporting personnel, including doctors, fly to a destination, there's always a lot of luggage. The corporate client programme also lets its clients collect points via airBaltic's loyalty programme, which can later be exchanged for even more benefits.

As part of its corporate client programme, airBaltic* offers discounted prices to all airBaltic destinations, with two pieces of checked baggage (25 + 25 kilograms) included. In addition, flights can be easily booked online or via a travel agency, and corporate customers have flexibility when it comes to unexpected changes, such as date or name changes, as well as ticket refunds. For even more comfort, corporate customers can use the fast-track security check at the Riga, Vilnius, Tallinn, Stockholm, Helsinki, Oslo, and Copenhagen airports, enjoy priority boarding, choose their favourite seat in the aircraft, and use Business class check-in at all airports, even if they're travelling in Corporate Economy Flex class.

The price for transporting sports baggage costs from EUR 39.99 when booking tickets on airBaltic.com, whereas it can cost up to EUR 75 when booking at the airport.

AN EPIC SNOW ADVENTURE – JUST A SHORT FLIGHT AWAY

Can't wait to shoot down the slopes? Here is our selection of airBaltic's destinations to consider when deciding on your next ski holidays!

Kittilä

Combine skiing with some northern lights and husky sledding in Finland. Kittilä Airport provides access to almost ten ski areas within a few hours' drive. One of the most popular is the lively village of Levi, about a 20-minute car ride from the airport. Ylläs, which is Finland's largest ski resort, is just 30 minutes away. Fly directly to Kittilä* from Tampere, or catch a flight from Tallinn and fly via Tampere from EUR 119 🇪🇺 one way.

Munich

While most skiers opt for Innsbruck or Salzburg, beat the lines at the baggage claim and go to Munich instead – the transfer time from the airport to many stellar resorts in the Bavarian and Tyrolean Alps is approximately three hours. Picturesque Kitzbühel, with its top-tier service and posh crowds, is just 1 ¾ hours from Munich. Alternatively, the traditional Tegernsee-Schliersee region lies less than 100 kilometres from Munich and offers a variety of slopes for all types of skiers, including beginners and experts, as well as cross-country skiers. Fly to Munich from Riga, Tallinn and Vilnius starting from EUR 69 🇪🇺 one way.

NEW! Innsbruck

A timeless gateway to some of Europe's top ski resorts, Innsbruck blends the thrill of winter sports with rich culture. Skiers can hit the renowned slopes of Nordkette, Stubai Glacier, and Axamer Lizum, each offering distinct challenges and scenic beauty, and all within easy reach from the city. Beyond the Alpine peaks, Innsbruck charms visitors with its imperial gems and hearty Tyrolean cuisine. Fly from Riga to Innsbruck from EUR 87 🇪🇺 one way.

Milan

When you think of a ski trip, Milan is not the first place that comes to mind. However, less crowded than their Austrian and Swiss peers and well-connected by motorways, the Italian Alps are just a few hours away from Milan. The closest resort, Piani di Bobbio, is just under an hour and a half's drive from Milan and is a great place to learn to ski. The large Pila ski resort lies a mere 20 minutes further and attracts more experienced skiers and snowboarders. Fly to Milan starting from EUR 79 🇪🇺 one way.

TIPS FOR YOUR NEXT SKI TRIP

Whether you're an experienced skier or planning to embark on your first mountain adventure, here are some pointers for a successful winter journey:

CHOOSE SMART: Different resorts cater to different abilities, so pick one that corresponds to your skills. Likewise, consider your budget, because the price for a day pass varies between resorts.

BOOK EARLY: Popular resorts sell out quickly. The same applies to accommodations – the closer the travel date, the more expensive and limited the options are.

BACK TO SCHOOL: Don't rely on your uncle, the self-proclaimed skiing expert. If you're new to the slopes, it's helpful to book at least two days at the ski school in order to learn the proper technique.

KNOW THE GRADING: Each resort has slopes of different grading, and the European Slope Grades range from green (easy) to black (advanced).

SAFETY FIRST: Always wear a helmet, and don't ski alone. It can get very sunny on the mountaintops, so apply sun cream to prevent silly ski goggle marks.

DRESS FOR THE OCCASION: Dress in layers. The base layer keeps you dry and sweat-free, the mid layer is for warmth, and the outer layer protects you from moisture and the wind.

DON'T OVERDO IT: Once you've booked your tickets, start adding some low-intensity cardio to your daily regimen to build endurance. Once on the slopes, don't wear yourself out in the first couple of days, because there's nothing pleasant about skiing with stiff muscles.

The new way to pre-order your meals airBaltic has enhanced its pre-order set meals with a customisable food experience that you can match to fit your mood, occasion, and cravings!

Love having breakfast for dinner? Or maybe your ideal meal involves three different snacks and a dessert? Then we've got some good news for you – airBaltic is offering a fully customisable dining experience in which you can mix and match dishes from an extensive pre-order menu.

airBaltic has long been one of the few airlines offering passengers the comfort of pre-ordering set three-course meals prior to their flight. Now, giving passengers even more choice, we've upgraded our pre-order meal concept. As of October, when booking your flight and choosing a pre-order meal option, you can select from a wide range of individual dishes of different sizes, types, and cuisines. The best thing about the new concept is that you get exactly what you want – nothing more, nothing less. This also means you only pay for what you'll actually enjoy. The newly expanded pre-order menu features plenty of options for every type of diet, from meat lovers to vegans. Some passenger favourites remain, such as the teriyaki salmon, but we've also added new flavours to satisfy our diverse crowd of passengers from all over the world. Staying hydrated during the flight is also important, so you can pre-order up to five drinks, both hot and cold.

Booked an early flight? Order classics such as a full English breakfast or choose an omelette with bacon or cottage cheese scones. You can even combine two or three of the meals and add a hot drink of your choice.

For lunch or dinner, pick a salad (bulgur, Caesar, Caprese, or chicken Cobb) and add a main course (choose from grilled BBQ beef, duck confit, chicken meatballs, or pasta with cheddar cheese). If the flavours of the East are more to your liking, enjoy the hot wonton soup, biryani rice, wok with chicken, or teriyaki salmon or spoil yourself with hot sushi. And of course, there's always dessert! How about a triple chocolate cake, panna cotta, or cheesecake?

Craving just a snack? Order a selection of cheese, seafood, or meat tapas. If you're in need of something refreshing, a vitamin-packed fruit plate might be just the thing. And when travelling with children, we offer some of their all-time favourites: chicken nuggets and cheesy pasta.

Don't forget to add your favourite drink. Orange, apple, multivitamin, and tomato juice; still and sparkling water; Coca-Cola and Coca-Cola Zero; black and green tea; and coffee are all available to round out your meal. Your only task now is to choose what you want!

While the meal options may vary depending on the route (the most extensive selection is available when flying from Riga), top-quality products are guaranteed on every flight. The ingredients are carefully selected from trusted local suppliers, and the meals are freshly prepared shortly before each flight. Plus, with the new mix-and-match pre-order concept, we've minimised packaging, thus reducing waste. It's better for you, and it's better for the planet.

Already booked your ticket without pre-ordering a meal? Don't worry – you can still add a meal later, although only the set menus will be available at that point. However, a full transition to the new mix-and-match pre-order concept will be complete in 2025.

HOW TO BOOK YOUR PRE-ORDER MEAL:

Visit airBaltic.com for more information. Order when booking your flight ticket.

Keep in mind:

- The pre-order mix-and-match is only available when booking a flight ticket and cannot be added later.
- Hot meals are served only on flights longer than 90 minutes. For shorter flights, there's a wide collection of cold snacks.
- The meal offer varies depending on the destination.
- Meals can only be pre-ordered for flights operated by airBaltic.

The speed is high airBaltic will be the first European based airline to provide Starlink internet to passengers on Airbus A220-300 aircraft. In early January, airBaltic conducted a certification test flight of SpaceX's Starlink high-speed internet aboard its aircraft. Departing from the airline's home base in Riga, the flight tested the Starlink aero terminal and internet connection quality as airBaltic progresses towards obtaining the necessary certification from the European Union Aviation Safety Agency (EASA). With plans to equip its entire fleet with Starlink, airBaltic aims to provide every passenger with seamless high-speed internet from boarding to landing, without the need for logins or complicated setups.

▲ Most satellite internet services come from single geostationary satellites orbiting the planet at a height of 35,786 km. As a result, the round trip data time (latency) between the user and satellite is high, making it nearly impossible to support streaming, online gaming, and video calls. Starlink satellites orbit the planet much lower (about 550 km) and cover the entire globe, so latency is significantly lower. (In this photo, a prototype system is being installed.)

Tatjana Nikankina, the Fleet Project Manager and Starlink Project Manager from airBaltic's side, and Artjoms Svetličnijs, airBaltic Senior Structure Engineer, who is responsible for engineering documentation review and adaptation to airBaltic's internal technical procedures, and supervision of the structural element installation process.

▲ The Starlink system has undergone rigorous testing before being certified for use on aircraft. Each component of the system has passed FAA DO-160 environmental tests for temperature and altitude variations, humidity, vibration, shock, electromagnetic compatibility, radio frequency susceptibility, lightning-induced transients, electrostatic discharge, and power input tests.

◀ airBaltic employees involved in this project with Starlink, PMV Engineering and EFT representatives after the test flight – with a very special thank you to the airBaltic engineers involved in the project, starting from the concept and prototype review to the supervision of work on the aircraft!

Have you ever envisioned the responsibility of overseeing flight logistics and ensuring operational excellence? This is the essence of what it means to be a flight dispatcher – a key player behind the scenes who ensures every flight is meticulously planned and executed.

As the critical link between the flight crew and ground operations, flight dispatchers manage comprehensive flight planning from start to finish. They monitor meteorological data, airspace restrictions, and airport conditions; calculate fuel needs; and ensure regulatory compliance at every stage. They also collaborate closely with pilots, the air traffic control centre, and other departments by providing essential information and making real-time decisions to address and resolve challenges such as delays, diversions, or other flight disruptions – all while maintaining the highest standards of safety and efficiency.

Certainly, the work environment in the OCC is fast-paced and constantly evolving, offering challenges that demand quick thinking and adaptability. Here, every detail is carefully monitored and coordinated in real time, and collaboration and individual expertise form the foundation of success. Mihails Skorobogatko, the Head of the Operations Control Center at airBaltic, emphasises that working in this role is more than just a job. 'It's a career where you can make a visible impact every day,' he says and highlights that the position involves continuous learning and strategic decision-making, with each shift presenting unique challenges and opportunities for growth.

Flight dispatchers are vital to our mission, and their work directly influences the success of every flight. Depending on your previous work experience, we offer a customised training programme to equip you with the essential skills for safe and efficient flight planning. This role is ideal for individuals who thrive in high-pressure situations, gain inspiration from dynamic challenges, and have a love for aviation.

CALVIN KLEIN
Eternity Moment
EDP for her, 50 ml

Inspired by the natural beauty of sea shells glistening in the sand on a warm summer day; washed up by the waves, they lie in the sun, waiting to be found.

Šis smaržūdens tika radīts, iedvesmojoties no jūras gliemežvāku dabiskā skaistuma, kad tie mirdz smiltīs siltā vasaras dienā. Viļņu izskaloti, tie guļ saulē un gaida, kad kāds tos atradīs.

LOVELY ON THE INSIDE

SARAH JESSICA PARKER
Lovely
EDP for her, 50 ml

Sarah Jessica Parker has been enamored with fragrance since she was a young girl. Inspired by her love of layering scents, Lovely is a silky white amber fragrance with timeless allure. A burst of mandarin, bergamot, and rosewood opens into lush lavender, apple martini, and patchouli. Cedar, white amber, and sultry musk create a seductive, lingering finish.

Sāra Džesika Pārkere jau kopš bērnības ir sajūsmā par smaržām. Smaržūdenim Lovely ir zidains un bezgalīgi valdzinošs baltā dzintara aromāts, ko iedvesmojusi Pārkeres mīlestība pret smaržām. Mandarīna, bergamotes un rožkoka aromātam seko sirds notis – sulīgais lavandas, ābolu martini un pačūlijas aromāts. Pamata notis veido ciedrs, baltais dzintars un muskuss.

The aromatic, woody and ambery fragrance opens with a vital blend of pink pepper, artemisia, sage and cardamom. A fragrance masterpiece that combines powerful masculinity and sensual sophistication in perfect harmony.

Koksnes un dzintara aromāts atklājas ar rozā piparu, artemīzijas ziedu, salvijas un kardamona notīm. Seko sirds nošu kombinācija, kas sastāv no lavandas, ciedra, ādas, kanēļa un sandalkoka aromātiem. EDP for her, 50 ml

Feminine sweetness, luxurious soft notes: Mandarin and blueberry form a fragrant duet in the top note, playing with the rich fruitiness of jasmine and orange blossom. Underpinned with the comforting warmth of vanilla, musk and sandalwood, while cashmere wood and icing sugar give the chords a delicate finish with their extravagance. Pink pepper provides the subliminal wow effect.

Sievišķīgs aromāts ar greznām un maigām notīm: mandarīna un melleņu duets augšējā notī aspelējas ar jasmīna un apelsīna ziedu aromātu. Pamattoni veido vaniļas, muskusa un sandalkoka mierinošais siltums, savukārt kašmīra koksne un pūdercukurs piešķir aromātam īpašu maigumu un ekstravaganci. Rozā pipari panāk tā dēvēto "wow efektu".
